COUNTRY ANALYSIS REPORT

China

In-depth PESTLE Insights

OVERVIEW

Catalyst

This profile analyses the political, economic, social, technological, legal and environmental structure in China. Each of the PESTLE factors is explored on four parameters: current strengths, current challenges, future prospects and future risks.

Summary

Key Findings

A country building on its political and economic prowess

The Chinese government has renewed its efforts to form new international relationships, along with strengthening existing ties with countries such as the US, Russia and the UK. China has been at the forefront to improve relations among members of Asia-Pacific Economic Co-operation (APEC) and a free trade agreement between China and the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN). In January 2010, China-ASEAN Free Trade Area agreement was completed and 90% of trade products were subject to zero tariffs and the service trade market was also substantially opened up. As a result, the China-ASEAN bilateral trade volume in January 2010 reached $21.46 billion, up 80% year-on-year, of which China exported over $10 billion to ASEAN, a year-on-year increase of 52% and imported over $10 billion from ASEAN, up 117% year-on-year.

The new system is expected to increase trade further in near future. Furthermore, both India and China are seeking to broaden their economic ties. The visit of the Indian Prime Minister, Manmohan Singh, to China in January 2008 led to the signing of a document that set out a "shared view of the 21st century." China also agreed to support India's bid to claim a

Abstract: The article focuses on the social, political, technological, economic, environmental and legal structure in China. It states that the country renounces its attempts to shape new international relations, and strengthens its existing relations with several countries such as Great Britain, U.S., and Russia. It says that China upholds firm economic development with an average gross domestic product (GDP) increase of 10.3% in 2003. It adds that China continues to adopt their one-child-per-family policy.

Executive summary

The global financial and economic crisis has not left Brazil unscathed. But a recovery is gathering momentum in the second half of 2009 and into 2010. Continued macroeconomic consolidation - based on a sound policy framework combining inflation targeting, a flexible exchange rate and rules-based fiscal management - together with a much improved external liability position have underpinned the economy's resilience. Policymakers should nevertheless not lose sight of longer-term challenges that will need to be addressed to boost the economy's growth potential and to close the gap in living standards in relation to the OECD area at a faster pace.

Reaping the benefits of macroeconomic consolidation

The short-term policy response to the global financial and economic crisis has been by and large appropriate. Decisive action to shore up liquidity since the onset of the crisis has been important, and there may be room for some further monetary easing in the coming months. Fiscal policy has been relaxed on cyclical and discretionary grounds without compromising longer-term debt sustainability, but additional activism would be inevitable, unless activity weakens much further. Additional structural reform should focus on containment of expenditure growth in support of continued fiscal adjustment, as well as on further financial deepening, based on a gradual elimination of compulsory reserve requirements for banks and a phasing out of existing directed credit operations.
